

Prophecy about Sunflowers and Soybeans

After Carl had relocated to Connecticut, he would return to his family home, in Shallotte on regular intervals, to visit with his mother. On one of these trips, he saw two of his sisters. They owned some property, on which they grew tobacco.

When Carl visited them he was looking at the tobacco crop, when he had a vision and told his sister. Someday, you will not be growing tobacco in this field, it will be planed with soybeans and sunflowers.

"You're crazy," Carl's sister said. "Why would be ever stop growing tobacco?" Who wants sunflowers and soybeans.

It took many years for that prophecy to happen, but toward the end of Carl's life, his sister was growing sunflowers and soybeans on her property.
